The boy was eating at school as usual when he unexpectedly discovered his classmate's tattoo in the soup. Frightened classmates threw down their spoons and fled in all directions. This pig bone soup stall in the school cafeteria had been quiet for years, but just a few days ago, it suddenly became incredibly popular. Since then, it's been packed every day. Many people even wait in line for three hours just to taste this food. The old grandmother became rich overnight because of this. This incident quickly attracted social media influencer Jack to check it out. During his live stream, he claimed that soup this delicious must have something suspicious in it. For more views, he interviewed many students. Many students also believed something unusual must be in the soup. The pig bone soup sold out in just half an hour, so the stall owner, the old grandmother, returned to the kitchen to prepare more ingredients. Jack decided to expose the secret of the pig bone soup for more views. Little did he know this decision would make him regret for life. He quietly approached the grandmother's stall with his phone. Just as he was about to lift the lid of the soup pot, the old grandmother suddenly appeared behind him. Jack was startled and panicked. The grandmother kindly asked Jack to leave. Seeing her speak so gently, Jack became even more aggressive for the sake of views. He insisted there must be something in the pot. So he tried to force open the pot lid. As they argued, Jack deliberately knocked the iron pot to the ground. Bones scattered everywhere. Seeing his goal accomplished, he pointed his camera at the bones on the floor and explained that the pot was full of dog bones. His live stream viewers instantly surged. Onlooking students began accusing the grandmother because eating dog meat is strictly prohibited in Thailand. But what no one noticed was, the grandmother secretly hid a bone wrapped in white cloth. Jack became increasingly audacious, speaking more and more recklessly. Students all took out their phones to take photos. In an instant, the formerly kind and gentle grandmother became labeled as an old witch. Jack even took photos to report the grandmother to the principal. This made Jack a famous figure at school. So he tattooed the keywords of this incident on his neck. Jack quickly became internet famous. Every student thanked him for revealing the truth while the grandmother suffered severe cyberbullying. Her stall faced closure. However, one day a person in black deliberately bumped into him. An angry Jack followed this person to the sports field. Since then, Jack disappeared from campus. After some time, the grandmother's business became good again, and students dining there discovered a piece of meat with  (Xiaohongshu - a Chinese
